

The German Tinnitus Foundation Charité at the Berlin Festival 2013

Young volunteers sought for the German Tinnitus Foundation Charité

Berlin, 9 August 2013 – The German Tinnitus Foundation Charité will again be present at the Berlin Festival this year on the 6 and 7 September, informing the mainly young music fans about tinnitus and hearing protection, and offering free ear plugs. The Foundation is looking for volunteers to man the info stand.

The next round of the Berlin Festival: On 6 and 7 September 2013, pop, techno, and indies fans will be thronging Berlin Tempelhof Airport to hear the Pet Shop Boys, Björk, Ellie Goulding, Casper and many more. In the framework of the education campaign "I hear something you can't hear," the German Tinnitus Foundation Charité will once again be on the spot. As at the Berlin Summer Rave 2013, the Foundation in its big igloo tent will be presenting information about tinnitus and hearing protection. And the young music fans will naturally again be provided with free ear plugs.

In an effort to interest still more young people for projects to prevent tinnitus, the Foundation is looking for volunteers to help spread the word about hearing protection at the Berlin Festival. Before the Festival, the volunteers will be trained on the subject of tinnitus and the Foundation, and offered a course in photography. If you are interested, you can contact us on the website of the German Tinnitus Foundation Charité:

http://www.deutsche-tinnitus-stiftung-charite.de/en/projects/youth/join_in/

About the German Tinnitus Foundation Charité:

The German Tinnitus Foundation Charité was established in August 2011 as a non-profit foundation under private law. In the conviction that tinnitus and hearing disorders need the best possible treatment and that every individual can do a great deal to protect himself or herself, the Foundation has set itself the following tasks: furthering research and scientific communication, as well as prevention and raising public awareness of the importance of treating one's hearing with care.

The foundation pursues its goals within the framework of its financial possibilities through research projects, education campaigns on the risks of noise and stress, the presentation of awards, and the development of preventive measures. Youth are a major target group for the work of the foundation.

You will find further information on the project and the Foundation under: www.deutsche-tinnitus-stiftung-charite.de

If you have any question please contact
Dr. Kurt Anschütz, Managing Director of the German Tinnitus Foundation Charité
Luisenstraße 13
10117 Berlin
Tel.: 030 / 85 73 26 86
Email: anschuetz@deutsche-tinnitus-stiftung-charite.de